ABOUT

I studied Economics before I ever wrote an ad, and it still shows in every one I write.

Blessing Oghie, Creative Strategist × Performance Marketer, based in Lagos, working globally. B.Sc. Economics, University of Lagos.

HOW I THINK

Economics taught me the questions.

Why does someone choose this over the alternative. What trade-off are they actually making. What happens to demand when the price, the offer, or the story changes.

Marketing taught me what to do with the answers.

Turn the insight into an angle. The angle into a hook. The hook into a story that earns attention on purpose, not by accident, because people buy from stories, not a brochure.

Performance told me if I was right.

The market doesn't argue with you. It just doesn't click, or it does. Ad accounts are one of the fastest feedback loops available for testing an idea about human behaviour.

WORKING STYLE

01 One variable at a time. Change five things and you learn nothing.

02 ROAS means nothing to me alone, I read it against contribution margin or not at all.

03 The hook comes before the brief, always in that order.

04 A losing creative gets killed fast. I don't defend sunk cost.

05 The landing page, the email flow, the SEO basics, that's the campaign, not the afterthought.

06 I own the channel end to end: the creative, the media, the digital layer holding it up.

07 Social gets a funnel, not just a calendar. It's a channel like any other.

08 I check GA4 and the pixel myself. I don't take a campaign's numbers on faith.

A PROJECT I WORKED ON

The full story.

Problem → decision → creative → result. One real project, in detail.

01 / LIFESTYLE

Glizt Paint

CREATIVE · PERFORMANCE

THE PROBLEM

The goal was sales, not reach, real distributors and bulk buyers for two newly launched paint lines, plus steady private-project clients.

THE DECISION

Ran a landing page and a direct WhatsApp ad in parallel to qualify buyers fast, timed to Nigeria's dry season when repainting demand peaks.

GROWTH ECONOMICS

Marketing is creative. Growth is economic.

A strong ROAS can still lose money after real costs. Ad metrics aren't business economics.

UNIT ECONOMICS: REFERENCE PANEL

● HOW I READ EVERY ACCOUNT

01 CAC What it actually costs to acquire one paying customer.	02 AOV Average order value: how much each purchase is worth.	03 LTV What a customer is worth across the full relationship.

CREATIVE LAB

Ads aren't just assets. They're experiments.

Every hook, script and landing page here exists to test a specific idea about why someone would buy.

AD CREATIVE

The reel.

Hook, angle, objective, result: the strategy behind every video.

HOOK WHO GAVE THIS FOUNDATION THE RIGHT TO SIT LIKE THIS?

ANGLE PLAYFUL HYPE AND SHADE-MATCH TRUST OVER A FEATURE LIST

OBJECTIVE BUILD TRUST, GENERATE LEADS, AND CONVERT THEM INTO BUYING CUSTOMERS

CTA SEND A MESSAGE ON WHATSAPP OR ORDER

RESULT ACTIVE COMMENT THREAD ASKING ABOUT PRICING AND SHADE AVAILABILITY, AND REAL ORDERS PLACED OFF THE BACK OF IT

HOOK CLEANING DAY JUST GOT A LITTLE MORE REWARDING.

ANGLE UGC ROUTINE DEMO TIED TO THE ANNIVERSARY SALE OFFER, NOT A HARD SELL

OBJECTIVE DRIVE AWARENESS AND PURCHASES DURING THE BUY 2 GET 1 FREE ANNIVERSARY SALE WINDOW

CTA STOCK UP BEFORE THE OFFER ENDS JULY 24

WHEN THIS APPLIES

You're spending on ads but the creative feels like guesswork, or the same few concepts keep getting reused.
